GRIEF-STRICKEN CROWDS SWARM AT SHIP OFFICE *HOPING FOR GOOD NEWS

Relatives and Friends in Greater Throngs Besiege White Star Officials, Both Here and in London, for Further Word.

Greater throngs than on any day since the news of the Titanic saster thronged the White Star Line offices to-day and the scenes of noe and anguish were intensified, scores breaking down from the strain forty-eight hours uninterrupted anxiety. Reports that scores of the revivors were badly injured and would require hospital attention brought ack the hosts of relatives and friends of the known survivors, whose ces bore acute testimony of blasted hopes as they stormed the infortion counters.

The tired and haggard clerks shook their heads and despairingly planted to the rosters of survivors. They had no news of any sort to part. Whatever news the officers of the line had received during te night was bottled up in the inner sanctums and the clerks were inaucted to answer no questions aside from the bald testimony at hand the shape of survivors' lists.

Beginning at an early hour lower Broadway began to choke with ssion of automobiles and taxicabs, which discharged their woetone passengers in an ever increasing swarm. The bleak and drizzling cast by the Red Cross for funds to the ay served to thin out the crowds of curious on the pavements and there the destitute rescued from the Titanic. very few who struggled within the entrances of No. 9 Broadway se faces did not contain mute evidence of their distressing errand.

Women were vastly in the majority again to-day, and while the many whight bravely to control their emotions, there were many pathetic scenes as the harrowed inquirers turned away from the counters and stumbled, sobbing, to a chair.

BIG THRONG AT LONDON OFFICE.

From the big cities in Canada and from London come the reports that the White Star offices were stormed to-day by larger and more insisting throngs. Grief in many cases had given way to passionate rage inspired by belief that news was being wilfully withheld.

The wives and mothers and children of the Titanio crew London offices of the line this morning and lifted their voices in a shrill schorus of wos. Grief and despair had reached a climax after a ceaseless wigil in the streets or before the bulletin boards of the newspapers. Relatives and friends of steerage passengers whose names had not appeared on the list obtained by the cruiser Chester came in a swarm to fight their way into the jammed offices and wall their quests for information. In this phase of the throng a dozen nationalities were represented, and a babel of tongues added There were Italians, Slavs, Greeks, Turks, Armenians, Transylvanians, Russians, Poloks, Germans, French, and, it seemed, representatives of every nation in Europe and Eastern Asia. For many of these there were no interers, and they chattered and wept and walled in vain

A dozen women relatives of Major Archibald Butt visited the White Star ofat different times to-day begging for information concerning the vague eports that President Taft's military aide had been saved. A Mrs. J. E. little later three elderly women relatives of the Major, who have been frequest visitors at the White Star offices since Monday, returned and begged for some tidings. They departed weeping and clinging to one another for support. None of these three women would give their names, though they said their home washington. They came to the offices in a big private limousine.
